When a grand jury gets around to investigating the riverfront bond issue election it may find that it will be a more tedious task than other election fraud inquiries un-dertaken by the June and September grand jures.

Ceremony at St. James's. The day's events began at St. James's Palace. There, 300 Accesion Councillors in resplendent attire drew up the deed which prolaimed George VI as ruler. There, heralds and pursuivants and trumpeters, with age old rote, cried out a new King was at hand.

A vast crowd, but an orderly one, listened while Garter Principal King of Arms, Sir Gerald Wollaston, read the proclamation from the balcony. A spotlight, made nec-essary by the dull skies and light rain, illuminated his scroll. Blasts from the silver trumpets rang out as the traditional words completing the proclamation: "God Save the King!" resounded and a battery in St. James's Park fired out a salute to the sovereign. Here it was, last January, that Edward VIII saw the proclamation

Suggests the Bar Elect Judges.

PROF. TREIMAN'S able presentation of the problem of selecting Judges prompts me to suggest, after nearly 30 years' contact with the judicial system in a clerical capacity, that the best method of selecting Judges is to let the whole bar do it-all that body of men and women who have qualified under the statute jurisdiction of the courts affected.

At first glance, it may appear that such a system would put control of an impor-tant branch of our government in the hands of a special class. So far as prac-tical workings are concerned, it is in the hands of that class anyhow, and anything which would perfect their control could only be an improvement. It should be remembered that no Judge takes any action at all until and unless the occasion for doing so is presented to the court by some lawyer, in the manner laid down by statute and rules of court, and then his action is limited to the scope marked out and developed for him by the lawyers in the case.

Moreover, that special class is a representative class. The interests of all are its interests.

It is sometimes said that bar associations are controlled by cliques, and it might be feared that such a system would put the bench at the mercy of small groups of the more influential or aggressive lawyers, or lawyers who might have group of lawyers would for long control the judicial ballot if the whole bar had the electing of the Judges, and each man's vote counted as much as any other man's, and every lawyer knew that his might be the deciding vote.

And, if members of the profession of high ability and integrity as men and lawyers knew they had only the legal profession to campaign to, they would be freer to stand for office. Good men could be relied on to offer themselves, because most lawyers covet judicial honor, and will abandon lucrative practice for it, if the chances of election and re-election are good, and may be expected to depend on how they acquit themselves as law-yers, which is their strength, rather than as politicians, which is a good lawyer's weakness. Such a candidate would need no campaign expense or "scramble," since he could rely on his professional prestige. HAMILTON GRAMLY.

inspired by the British crisis. Advocates of the class-struggle theory point to the before its passage have not been realised, and the former King's visit to the distressed region of South consumption of milk has increased, to the profit of Wales, and his words of sympathy for the depression victims there. "Something must be done for these people," he said. This is construed as a rebuke to a set of do-nothing Ministers, and an expression of determination to foil their desire to keep the unemployed in misery. The remark might have had that subtle significance, or it might have been merely the exclamation that would come from any warm-hearted visitor, of royal or humble birth, on viewing human suffering.

The visit to South Wales took place several weeks after the King and Mr. Baldwin began their discussions of the monarch's desire to marry Mrs. Simpson. Aside from that refuting fact, the Tories-vs.-commoners idea was not followed in the line-up of the British parties.

The Labor party might have been expected to leap eagerly to the defense of a King who was their champion. But it didn't. It took the side of the Cabinet, with the explanation that if the King were allowed to override the advice of his Ministers, parliamentary rule in England would be endangered. And the Communist party organ, which certainly would express the proletarian point of view, said: "There is no crisis in all this business for the working class."

We quoted yesterday the constitutional viewpoint of Prof. Harold J. Laski, brilliant Labor spokesman. Now let us hear from Ellen Wilkinson, Labor M. P. for Jarrow, in England's most distressed region. Miss Wilkinson spoke in St. Louis last year, and her address left no question of her sympathy for to practice law, and who reside in the the workers. In a radio address a few days ago, she stated her own opposition to the King, and then reported the feeling in her constituency:

In Jarrow, the royal family has been very popular, particularly the King, because he had been up there when Prince of Wales and had seen himself what conditions were like. But I was up there on Saturday, speaking on things and being in touch with the people, and I found that in the North they were solidly against him. . . . They were very much of the opinion that the lady he had chosen—by the fact of her divorces was definitely unsuitable for the throne.

It was stated by competent observers that if the issue had come to a vote, Edward would have had less than 60 supporters in Commons. Surely, in a democratically elected body of 615 members, the working people (if their fate had been at stake) would have to submit plans and obtain permits. Penalties have had more friends than that.

After the abdication, the bars were down for frank speech in Parliament. Mr. Baldwin and the Cabinet were bitterly criticised in several addresses, but not by one speaker were they accused of forcing the grind the faces of the poor. Josiah Wedgwood, a the truckers and small dealers, but any approach to of confidence for the King, announced he had no Meanwhile, the ordinance proposal should stimulate regrets that his motion had failed.

Edward doubtless had the welfare of the people at heart. He did not lose his throne for that reason, however. He ran up against what the London Times called "the hard core of British tradition of conduct." And certainly that tradition is not held by the aristocracy alone.

The feeling against divorce is widespread among all classes. In any community, in fact, the spectacle of a bachelor courting a married woman would be the new reformatory has come to be known throughviewed with disfavor. All groups stood united on the out the country as an institution which teaches gainbe an evil day if the King could overrule his Ministers, the representatives of the people.

A PLANETARIUM FOR ST. LOUIS?

The visit to St. Louis of Franz Fieseler of Jena, Germany, has served the good purpose of reviving discussion of the erection of a planetarium in St. Louis. Much talked about several years ago, the proposal has lain more or less dormant recently. Meanwhile, the idea is being taken up in other cities. The Adler planetarium, which many persons describe as the most worthwhile thing at Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition, is no longer the only one in the country. THE MAYOR'S SMOKE ORDINANCE.

It would be a great mistake to suppose that Mayor Dickmann's smoke ordinance, introduced yesterday, contains a sovereign cure for the problem. It is essentially a proposal to abate, not to eliminate. Its maximum effect, if it be assumed that no revolutionary changes in the fuel situation occur in the meanime, could not be felt until after a period of years.

The ordinance is based upon a 60-day study made by Osborn Monnett, consulting fuel engineer of Chicago, at the behest of the Board of Aldermen. Mr. Monnett, however, placed the emphasis on the use of stokers in large heating plants and, in the case of mail heating plants, on the development of a smokeless fuel to be made from Illinois coal. He pointed out that technological advances have reached the point where it has become profitable for private enterprise to place such a fuel on the market. In four or five years, Mr. Monnett thinks, this smokeless fuel can be sold at such a price as to drive raw coal from the market.

Mayor Dickmann's ordinance departs from the general Monnett plan in placing emphasis upon fuel control. Section 18 provides that coal containing in excess of 12 per cent of ash or 2 per cent of sulphur shall be washed before it is brought into St. Louis. Just how efficacious the washing process would be remains to be seen. It does not hold out the same promise as a thoroughly processed fuel. It would not produce a smokeless fuel.

Perhaps the principal effect of the washing would be to reduce the amount of cheap Belleville coal, high in sulphur and ash content, that is being trucked over the Municipal Bridge. Whereas many of the big mines already have coal-washing equipment, the small ones have not and their business might be damaged by the requirement. In turn, the washed coal is likely to be of a higher price, which would cause protest and make enforcement of the ordinance more difficult.

The bill creates a separate smoke division in the Department of Public Safety, with a commissioner, a deputy, eight inspectors and a clerical force. There would also be an appeal board. Persons making new heating installations, or repair of old ones, would are provided for dense emission of smoke.

In presenting this bill, the city administration has taken bolder action toward the smoke problem than it has heretofore, and conditions are so bad that almost any kind of action is preferable to none. The King's departure so that the privileged class might Board of Aldermen may expect strong opposition from Laborite who early in the controversy moved a vote the problem always brings cries from some quarter. study leading to a plan which will not merely abate smoke, but eliminate it.

MADRID'S GALLANT RESISTANCE.

It was almost six weeks ago that the siege of Madrid began. The outlook for the Spanish Government was of the darkest. Gen. Franco's forces had won an unbroken series of victories since they began the insurrection four months before. The Government had fled from Madrid to Valencia. It seemed only a matter of a few days until the Fascist rebels would enter the capital and end that important phase of the war.

Instead, the People's Front has rallied and has held efits of co-operative housing.

Its garrison has had to throw back the attacks of fierce Moors and dogged Foreign Legionnaires at the city's gates and in the suburbs. The people have had to endure severe physical hardships, and the nervous strain of the air raids, which have killed 2000 or more inhabitants, including many women and children. Yet the fall of Madrid seems more remote than a month ago.

Why this surprising turn of events? The spirit of the people must be noted, first of all. These citizens have determined to die rather than submit to the The unprecedented outpouring of public opinion in Fascists. But morale cannot hold back an army Government troops have become hardened, trained better organized. Having defended Germans against atrocity stories during war, British writer claims special right to assail present cruel treatment of non-Aryans by Nazis; practices are worse than those charged in 1914-18, he says, for they are official policies; urges Christians to speak out against unspeakable sufferings inflicted on Jews.

A Letter by Sir Norman Angell to the London Times.

HE profoundly moving article in your issue of today on "Racialism in the Reich," and on the position of non-Aryan Christians in Germany, must raise, for those of us who believe better international undering to be the first need of civilization at this moment, some extremely difficult

During the war our press rang with stories of German atrocities—the ruthless exe-cution of civilians, the destruction of cathenurses, the mutilation of children, the cru-cifixion of prisoners, the boiling down of the dead for fat. Such stories were served up to us almost daily for nearly four years.

There were those among us (the writer was one) who protested constantly and persistently against the repetition of such stories, which, even if partly true (and they were mainly false), could only have the effect of providing in a partly true and they were mainly false). fect of provoking in our people a temper fatal to a sound peace when the time for peace-making came.

The treaty reflected those stories. Against some of its terms, as against the barbarism of the post-war blockade, the imbecilities of the reparations claims, the folly of the Ruhr invasion, we also protested. Such "pro-Germanism" was not then exactly popular; as little popular as the attempts which some ple some of the miseries of war by caring for German prisoners during the war and for German children by relief measures after

It is necessary to mention these practical ofs of "pro-Germanism" only because of

Your correspondent reveals what the anti-Jew measures of the German Government really mean in terms of human suffering, hu-miliation, degradation. A deliberate daily tor-ment applied not only to Jews but to what in Germany are delicately termed "half-breeds"; and not only to half-breed men, but to half-breed women and girls, and rather particularly to children.

Your correspondent describes how sign

Your correspondent describes how suc-cessfully life is made a martyrdom for these children: set apart, physically and morally; made often in the schools to sit on separate benches; forbidden to join in the sports or games; forbidden the swimming bath, the hiking party, and compelled as part of their "lessons" in the class to listen to the "gross-est and most shameful accusations" leveled against their forebears.

schools, they are nevertheless compelled to go up and ask for it, so that the "lesson" of being publicly refused may be duly impressed upon their schoolfellows.

Your correspondent's account is not in the category of war-atrocity stories for several reasons. He is telling us, not what the enemies of Germany say of Germany, but what Germans, through their laws, say of themselves; telling us, not of measures taken in the blind retaliation of war against an armed enemy and perhaps later regretted; but of measures decreed deliberately in cold blood, systematically applied month after month, year after year, against a completely unarmed people who have never risen in armed rebellion, never attempted so to do; who, suffering wrong through the ages, have never resorted to arms for redress, who have applied to the full the method of non-resistance or non-violent resistance. And this daily torment of an unarmed people, of little children, is inflicted for one reason only: in their veins may run the blood of the race which gave us Jesus Christ, His Mother and the Apostles.

If every war atrocity alleged against the Germans were true, they would not consti-tute an indictment as severe as that which the Germans have brought against themselves by these measures

Every people has been guilty of cruelty upon the battlefield, or in repression of rebellion—we in Ireland, India, South Africa; the Americans in the Philippines; the French in their revolutions and counter-revolutions. Fear, and the lusts of the blood feud, may mentarily debase the best of us. But the momentarily debase the best of us. But the Germans are not suppressing an armed rebellion of Jewry, nor fearing one. And even if it were so—"bables are neutral." But not in that new Germany whose leader tells us almost daily that the one thing he cares for most under heaven is the "honor" and good name of his country. name of his country.

These things need to be said by those who in the past have given indubitable proof of their good will to Germany, by pro-German-ism when it was least popular and when a little more of it in our statesmanship would have been most useful.

The danger now is not that we shall overemphasize the evil of certain tendencies in Germany, but, from a mistaken notion of making amends, reconciliation, shall pretend that evil is good, and, in the effort, so lose the distinction between right and wrong that we may be led to imitate in our own country the policies whose real nature we have refused to face. Signs of that imitation begin to show, as all the world knows.

It is not a question of "internal German politics." Christendom has, after all, if not a collective responsibility to Jewry, at least a collective debt, Can a Christian quite forget that Jesus, His Mother and Apostles were Jews? That the religious literature of which we have drunk more deeply than of any other whatsoever is a Jewish literature? Can we witness complacently the infliction of these infamies upon the children of His and Her race, pass by upon the other side and say no word?

Simeon Strunsky in the New York Times.

England's troubles are happy days for the inside story and the lowdown. The inside story now enjoying most vogue ex-plains the crisis as a plot on the part of the English vested interests to "get" a demo-cratic King.

Particularly are the possessing classes in-ritated by Edward's avowed sympathy for the people of the distressed industrial areas.

His recent visit to South Wales turned the spotlight on a problem neglected by the Baldwin Government and precipitated the crisis. King Edward had to be ousted be-fore he could do further mischief. The Simp-ton involvement was seized upon as a club son involvement was seized upon as a club. So we get the picture: The possessing classes in the Cabinet put the King on the spot.

Five years ago, the Nationalist Government came into power, with Ramsay Mac-Donald as its nominal head but Mr. Baldn's followers as virtually its sole suppor At that time, the British unemployed numbered about $,000,000. Today they number 1,500,000. British unemployment has thus been cut in half under Mr. Baldwin; whereas here at home, the best we could do ap-parently has been to cut down unemploy ent by one-third from its peak of 1933. ment by one-third from its peak of 1933.

Such a record plainly suggests that Mr. Baldwin and his accomplices in church and state have not been altogether indifferent to the distress of the British working class. As to the methods employed by Mr. Baldwin to fight business depression, it is interesting to note that they furnished the model for our own New Deal. for our own New Deal.

Mr. Baldwin devalued the pound sterling and that certainly was not a stroke in favor of the possessing classes. He refunded the nal debt, slashing the rate of interest Counting the lower interest and the cheaper pound, we might say, roughly, that the por sessors of British Government bonds were jolted by Mr. Baldwin to the extent of 50 per

It is also on record that Mr. Baldwin, no doubt in cahoots with the Archbishop of Canterbury and other conspirators against a democratic King, built a good many houses for the British people. The object was two-fold, to provide work and decent habitations ion in Britain was going of ever since the war, but it has been the last few years. Recently it has av eraged 300,000 homes a year, meaning accommodations for 1,250,000 people. Over here we are still discussing large-scale home con-

me ships. No one questions Edward's ready impathy for distress. And it is a moving ory about his inspection of the new Queen sympathy for distress. And it is a moving story about his inspection of the new Quee Mary at Southampton and the contrast he drew between super-luxury on the ship and squalor in Southampton slums. But it is a bit unfair to suggest that Mr. Baldwin built the Queen Mary solely for himself and his kind. The ship was built with Government funds for the primary purpose of bringing work to the prostrate shipyard industry.

Thus it would appear that if Mr. Baldwin and the Archbishop of Canterbury engineered a capitalist plot against a progressive King, they managed it cleverly. They have been slick enough to enlist the support of the British Labor party.

Mayor Announces He Will Appoint Building Trades Council Head to Vacant Post

Thomas F. Quinn, president of the Building Trades' Council and secretary of Steam and Gas Fitters' and Helpers' Local Union No. 562, will be appointed by Mayor Dickmann to fill a vacancy on the Board of Education, the Mayor announced today. The appointment probably will be made Morday. Quinn, a Democrat, who came close to election to the board in 1935, will serve until the next board election, in April. The place will be filled by election then for the remainder of the unexpired term, running to 1941. The appointment will maintain the bipartisan balance required by law. The vacancy was due to the resignation, effective last Wednesday, of Joseph J. Ward, who will become a Circuit Judge

Labor circles advocated Quinn's appointment. The Mayor expressed appreciation of Quinn's dealings in abor matters.

By a vote of 6 to 1, with Henry P. Schroeder dissenting, the board yesterday adopted an amendment to its agreement with the PWA for a $578,000 grant on its building program. The original agreement listed construction of a high school, two grade schools, an edu-cational museum and a portable center and alteration and additions board sought to make the authority general, without listing the number or type of structures. The PWA objected, so the form approved yesterday called for four new buildings, additions and al-terations to 10 buildings and purchase and installation of perma

Lawyer for Frankfurter Says Display of Christmas Plant Opens-Another at Shaw's Garden Tomorrow.

> A display of poinsettias, "Noche Buena," the Christmas eve flower. homelands, was opened today at the new Jewel Box floral conservatory in Forest Park. Similar displays will open at 9 a. m. tomorrow at the Floral Display House in Shaw's Garden, and at the Board of Education exhibition house, Blow street and Field avenue, south of Carondelet Park. After today the Jewel Box will be open from 9 a. m. to 9:30 p. m. daily and Sunday.

Discovered and introduced into the United States in 1828 by Dr. Joel R. Poinsette of Charleston, S. C., then American minister to Mex-C., then American minister to Mexico, after whom the plant was named, the poinsettia has established itself as a Christmas plant, because it blooms during the holiday season and probably because its brilliant red bracts are suggestive of Santa Claus' coat. To the Mexican peon, however, it has a deeper significance for he surrounds it with fanciful tales of Christmas and the birth of Christ. To him it always will be in bloom on Christmas eve.

At Shaw's Garden, all three of the color varieties, red, pink, and white, may be seen in a formal design. Some of the plants of the red variety are six feet tall, an unusual height for hot-house cultivation, and the clusters of red bracts measure 17 inches in diameter.

Alternate Red and White.

Two of the display beds are arranged with alternate plants in red and white, another is a mass of flaming red, edged with the deli-cate and fragrant white stevia, while the pink variety, which is suposed to have been originated. by a grower in Merseberg, Germany, stand apart in beds of ferns.

The white variety was discovered near Mexico, D. F., in 1835, and the double variety with its large clusters of the colorful bracts, were found in an Indian village in Guerrero, Mexico in 1872, and sent to a wealthy New York florist, who introduced them into cultivation in the United States. "Christmas Gold." a button chrysanthemum of late-blooming habit, white button mums, plants of deco-rative foliage, and the Jerusalem cherry, the fruit of which also is flaming red, are used in the bor-der of the design, simplicity being the effect with only a few colors

At the Jewel Box, a much larger formal design, in which about 5000 plants were used, has been set up. There are 11 beds of pink and red poinsettias, stevias, Jerusalem cherry plants, Oriental peppers, foliage plants and ferns. Sixteen flood lights have been installed for night exhibitions. Overhead are hung baskets of ferns and philodendrons, a wine with a fern such particle has been installed for night exhibitions. vine with a down-growing habit. The expansive beds, some of them of solid red, and others of solid pink, making a striking mass effect, are arranged to include two pools at either end both ends of the Jewel Box.

DECISION DELAYED

Possible."

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 12.-After United States District Judge John J. Gore reserved decision yesterday on an application of 19 power companies for a preliminary injunction against the power program of the Tennessee Valley authority. He called for additional information.

"Under the concessions that (power company) counsel has already made, that this injunction be limited to the construction and operation of the TVA electric system rather than to the construction of the dams, I don't think it (the injunction) is going to hurt much," the Judge remarked.

"If I should grant an injunction," he added, "I want it to do the least injury that it possibly can to the defendants."

The power companies asked for the injunction on the ground that TVA competition already constituted a threat of irreparable injury, and said that no harm would be done the Authority by halting expansions until March 8, 1937, when the utilities suit attacking constitutionality of the program will be heard on its merits.

TVA attorneys replied that the requested order would handicap men out of work and breach con-tracts for materials with which to build power lines. James L. Fly, TVA general solicitor, added that work on certain transmission should not be balted "under circumstances."

IS SYMPHONY SOLDIST

Plays Glazounow Concerto in A Minor-Orchestra Per-, forms Kessler Work.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.
SCIPIONE GUIDI, concertmaster of the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, made his annual appearance as soloist yesterday afternoon at the Municipal Auditorium, playing the Glasounow concerto in A minor. As in the past, his execution was precise, his tone quality was good and his general musicianship was reflective of a sincere and refined artistic approach.

The Glazounow concerto, however, is commonplace. Its appeal is so direct and so much on the surface that the listener involuntarily found himself wishing for some extraneous lure even if it meant the application of a little Schmalz by application of a little Schmalz by the performing artist. Such a pro-cedure, of course, was not to be expected from Mr. Guidi. His tem-perament and his artistic inclinaons were all against it. So the certo was performed with as ch finish and as much restraint had been a concerto by Mozart.

The orchestra under Mr. Golschmann gave him loyal and effective support. But his encore—Bach's chaconne from the D minor sonata, which would have been a bit longish for an ordinary occasion—was sh for an ordinary occasio the more enjoyable of Next in interest to the solo per-Next in interest to the solo performance was the orchestra's performance of an introduction and fugue by John Kessler of St. Louis. Unlike other works by Mr. Kessler which have been performed in St. Louis, this composition was objective. The material was wry and deliberately unsensual, except for a short espressivo section in the prelude, and the harmonies were prevailingly dissonant. The attention was therefore concentrated on the strong and expert construction and the resulting design, texture and play of dynamics. The work received a firm and animated per-formance which brought out the well-timed contrasts of the text and its consistently rising interest. Mr. Kessler shared the applause of the audience with Mr. Golschmann and the orchestra.

The last half of the program was devoted to old favorites. There were devoted to old favorites. There were three excerpts from Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite, which as usual aroused Mr. Golschmann's devoted and discerning enthusiasm, the "Forest Murmurs" from Wagner's "Siegfried" and the "Tannhauser" overture. The orchestra, in general, was in good form but was especially effective in the Stravinsky suite.

ANTI-SMOKE BILL WON'T BE IN TIME FOR THIS WINTER

Mayor Hopes Proposed Ordinance Will Be Passed and Ready for Use Next Fall.

HE WANTS MEASURE HANDLED CALMLY

Points Out That Hardship on Poor, Through Any Price Increase, Must Be Avoided.

The anti-smoke ordinance sponsored by Mayor Dickmann and introduced yesterday in the Board of Aldermen is not expected to affect the St. Louis smoke pall this winter, the Mayor said today to a Post-Dispatch reporter. He added that the proposed ordirequiring that low grade soft coal be treated to remove part of its smoke-producing content before sale in St. Louis, should be considered unhurriedly and "calmly." Passage of the bill within the next few months, he said, would make it possible to set up the required organization and make a good start with an educational campaign by

The Mayor repeated his views expressed in a letter to the board yesterday, in which he referred to two problems presented by the smoke situation. One was to avoid placing a hardship on the poor by making necessary a price increase for low grade coal. The other was t economic loss by excluding coal from Southern Illinois which forms an important part of the St. Louis trade territory. E. J. Wallace, St. Louis coal dealer, in a statement issued yesterday, hailed the proposed ordinance as one which should meet approval by the coal trade. He said some requirements should be revised, however. Clarence G. Stiehl of Belleville, president of the St. Clair-Madison Counties Coal Operators' Associa tion, differed with Wallace. He contended the required washing of coal would entail a prohibitive expense for producers of low grade fuel and raise the retail price about 50 per cent. In the Belleville district, he said, not more than half the producers could afford participation even in establishment of co-operative washer.

About 85 per cent of the coa mined in the Belleville district is narketed in St. Louis.

Dean Deal Efforts Not Over.

OTWITHSTANDING the collapse of their baseball talkies in New York, Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon apparently have not accepted defeat in their efforts to peddle Dizzy Dean for a price that would set an all-time high.

After a breathing spell, enabling our silver-tongued persuader, Branch Rickey, to regain his wind, it is given out that the Cardinal officials will renew efforts to dispose of the talkingest and winningest pitcher the Cardinals ever owned. The valuation in cash and players placed on Dean by the Red-birds would crowd $400,000 closely. If his pitching arm remains sound for a few years more, the Great Diz should be worth the money easily, for he is the best drawing card since Ruth.

However, it's difficult to get baseball club owners, or even fans, to believe that any one player can be worth $75,000 more than the entire Browns baseball club with the franchise thrown in. Unless the Redbirds' price is changed it is likely that Ole Diz will still be popping off and winning games on the home hill.

And as far a local fans go, there isn't much doubt that a majority would prefer to have Dean

One More Year of Lively Ball,

THE de-rabbited baseball will not be with us after all, next season. Manufacturers will not "deaden" the 1937 ball for the reason that already they have manufactured a sufficient quantity of lively ones to provide amply for the entire campaign of 1937.

That's very obliging of the magnates to adapt themselves to the manufacturer's welfare and postpone their own plans.

However, it's no mean item as the major leagues alone use about $150,000 worth of baseballs an-$150,000 worth of baseballs annually. Moreover, the manufacturers of baseballs are also identified with major-league club ownership, which may account for the consideration shown.

The fans, especially the feminine ones, will raise no objection. The home run ball continues to be Schmeling promptly said that was satisfactory to him and Braddock, after going into a quick huddle with his peppery little manager, Jos Gould, announced he also would abide by the commission's edict. Thus, apparently the plans for a 12-round no-decision fight between Braddock and Louis in Atlantic City in February have fallen flat. The commission succeeded in bringing the fighters to terms after Gould had refused to permit Brad-Gould had refused to permit Brad-dock to sign the contract sub-mitted by Madison Square Garden, joint promoter of the title fight with Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Sporting Club, because it specified neither combatant was to ngage in more than four-round ex-finds him out of the running.

This will seem strange to many of the old timers who have watched the progress of this persevering, hard-working player from the time he began giving exhibitions while still in short trousers. This writer considers Hoppe to be the best grounded player of them all today, despite his more than 40 years of public competition. If a tournament embodying all varieties of cue play could be arranged, Hoppe would be favorite to win it.

That even he can't be sure of repeating a championship victory repeating a championship victory is due to the element of chance in billiards. According to the country's best billiard student, Charley Peterson, chance intervenes to the extent of 38 per cent in three-cushion billiards, 18 per cent in cushion caroms and 8 per cent in balkline.

St. Louis U. High opened with a rush in its game with Normandy, running up an 8-0 lead, but the Vikings came back to tie the score and send the contest into overtime. Roger Traynor and Joe Nouss scored for the Billiken juniors in the extra period to give the team victory. Lee Keyser, the man who put the lights in the baseball parks, was greatly disappointed over the outcome of the Feller case. He thought it would be a case of back to Des Moines for Bob. ILLINOIS BASKET TEAM PLAYS DEPAUW TONIGHT

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Dec. 12,-As a apering off drill in preparation for the game with DePauw University of Green Castle, Ind., here tonight, Coach Doug. Mills sent his University of Illinois basketball squad through a light workout yesterday afternoon, during which practically all departments of the game came in for some attention. The Illini had little trouble winning over Carroll College of Waukesha, Wis., in their opener Tuesday night by a 51-to-34 count, but they realize the going will be much harder when they face DePauw. The Indiana aggregation has played two games so far this season and emerged vicorious in both encounters.

Captain Robert Riegel, veters lanky Illini center who was on the injured list and did not play against Carroll is now in good shape and will face DePaum, which should add some strength to Illinois defense Dakota Coyotes.

Coach Rube Hoy's players—largely sophomore talent—turned in the upset before one of the largest resu and Tom Nisbet who played sensational ball at the forward positions in their first collegiate competition in the Carroll game will again be at the forward jobs with Henry and Vopicka stated to hold game here.

Nebraska led, 14 to 8, seven minutes before the first half ended; but a sensational soph, Maynard Ingalls, began finding the loop. And before the halftme he scored 12 points to give South Dakota a 23 to 18 intermission advantage.

Although most turf experts rate J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon the best two-year-old of the season Jack Campbell, official handicapper of the Jockey Club, does not concur. In making up his "experimental handicap" in which he rates 100 horses, Campbell rates E. R. Bradley's Brooklyn first at pounds with Pompoon second at 125. Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' pair of Reaping Reward, 124, and Case Ace, 123, are next in line.

Elwood Sachsenmaier's Roman Soldier, which won all four of the big autumn stakes for older horses in Maryland this fall, has been named for the Metropolitan and Suburban Handicaps and the Saratoga Cup, to be run over New York tracks next summer. He probably will appear also in the Brooklyn and Butler Handicaps.

The Australian barrier will be used to start the two-year-old races at Tropical Park after Jan. 1. The device, shipped from New York where it also has been adopted, will be installed in the quarter-mile chute at the head of the stretch for use in the "baby" races. While this training will give the juveniles good preparation for their New York appearances next summer, it is believed in some quarters it will cause them trouble when they race in states which do not use the barrier.

King's Mother Is Quite Fond of Scotch

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 12.—Elizabeth, the new Queen, although not of royal blood and the first commoner to occupy the throne in nearly 400 years, belongs to one of Scotland's proudest families. She is the daughter of the Earl of Strathmore.

For years she and her husband, then Duke of York, have represented the royal family in an almost endless procession of public events. She accepted those public duties with a friendly dignity. Her charm is of the quiet sort. In recent years she has spent an increasing amount of time with the Queen mother, who is fond of her, and has relieved Queen Mary of many public tasks.

In personal appearance and clothes, the new Queen typifies British conservatism. She uses virtually no makeup. The pink in with a veil.

But if the opening bid is six no trump do not bid seven in a worthless five or six card suit. Partner may have bid six no trump on a hand such as: ♦AQJ10 ♥AKQ ♦AKQ ♣AKQ

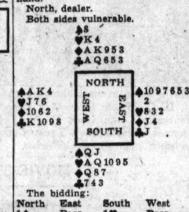

If you bid seven in a suit which does not contain the missing king the grand slam may well be lost.

A great many correspondents ask me the correct opening lead on such and such a hand against certain bidding. I do my best to serve them by selecting a lead which is academically correct, but am tempted to have a rubber stamp made to use on all such inquiries, pointing out that in the department of opening leads particularly some acquain ance with one's opponents' bidding tendencies is essential. Against other players in the South position I would not open a diamond, because I would strongly suspect a double-cross i. e., that they were attempting to create in my mind the suspicion that they due to lack of control of the opening. Effort to Be Made to Send First Day Covers by Christmas—General News

DOSTOFFICE DEPARTMENT Pofficials expect an exceptionally heavy sale of the new army. Navy Commemoratives and are making special arrangements to handle the demand so that every one ordering or sending first day covers will receive them by Christmas. This is the first time the Postoffice Department has issued new stamps so near to Christmas rush mail and that special arrangenents are necessary.

The first two values of the Army.

Navy Series are to be placed on sale on Dec. 15. The department to date already has received about 2000 orders for the new stamp through the Philatelic Agency at Washington. All orders for the 1-cent Army or Navy stamps should be sent separately and not with orders for other stamps to avoid confusion. The Postoffice department has already received more than 40,000 requests for first day covers at the Washington Postoffice. Requests are still arriving at the rate of 1000 daily. The Philatelic Agency will not handle first-day covers. The Washington Postoffice will not accept personal checks or stamps for the payment of postage on first-day covers and they are not retible for cash mailed in envel-

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has started printing the 1-cent Army and 1-cent Navy compratives. The remainder of Army-Navy series, consisting of eight denominations, four each for the Army and Navy in the two, three, four and five cent denominions, will be issued some time in January and thereafter every two or three weeks until all denomina tions have been released.

IF YOU ASK MY OPINION

By Martha Carr

HAVE lots of magazines that I would like to give some hospital or other organization; some are not so new, but have lots of good reading in them. I have no car and am just a janitor's wife, living in University City, and no way to deliver them. But if you will put this in the paper and get answers, maybe they will say they can call for them. I have to be rid of them before Christmas, so will watch for your answer in the paper.

MRS. J. L. S.

Thank you for the offer. I am sure we will hear from someone who wants them. If you have the opportunity you might call the Missouri Welfare League, through whom reading matter is sent to prisoners in the State institution Koch Hospital and the Firmin Desloge Hospital might like to have them. I will let you know as soon as possible. Give me your name and address right away.

My dear Mrs. Carr: DLEASE tell me where I can find a home or homes for my pet cat and one kitten. The mother is half Persian and a very beautiful animal. We are breaking up housekeeping and I find I cannot

This surely should be a nice Christmas present for some little girl, and I shall be glad to send you any requests we have.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

WONDER if you can help me with this problem? What can you do about people who ask you to do errands for them, such as buy clothes and pay bills down-

I work downtown and sometimes it is very inconvenient to walk six or ten blocks out of my way; and, not only that, I do not like the responsibility of carrying the money as I work in a place where my purse is accessible to anyone. I have tried to say that I had no time or that I had quite a bit to do for myself; but they cannot take

If something should happen to the money, I'd feel obligated to re-place it; but that would be very hard to do, as my husband isn't working steady, and I am paying for my furniture. If this were a problem of handling nosey neighbors. I would know what to do, as I have managed that before; but this has me stumped.

An imposition which cannot be dealt with in a delicate manner, calls for other tactics. People who cannot take a hint are not so sensitive of feeling that you need be backward about it.

Why not have the courage to state on the next occasion that, while you are always glad to be of service to your friends when they need you, and you have wanted to help her out, your time just now must be utilized every minute; but the greatest hesitancy you have is the responsibility of the money in a place where it cannot be guarded. Say that you are afraid something might happen to it, and that, of (stress on the "of you are not able to replace it, should such an accident occur. And, with this preface, vising her that the safest, most direct method is to inclose her check in the bill and mail it direct.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

MY HUSBAND and I have been married 18 years and have two lovely and well-reared children; children to be proud of. We have a lovely home. I made a great effort to have it that way for these children as well as ourselves.

At Pensacola, Lieut. "Win" Spencer and his friends talked of the French war ace, Lieut. They talked, too, of the Lafayette Escadrille, American fliers serving with the French forces, and called them "lucky" to be seeing such action. And there was the rumor that in England plans were underway to build 100 airplanes capable of flying continuously for 10 hours. There was a report that a new "giant airplane" made in England had flown to a height of 7000 feet, carrying 20 passengers.

By the Rev. J. F. Newton YEARS ago a friend of mine, who seemed easy-going and self-satisfied, if not self-seeking, gave me a great surprise. Suddenly he flung himself into an unpopular cause like a crusader.

Not one of us knew, or even imagined, that he had it in him to do it. Nor did he, apparently. It shocked me awake, and since then shocked me awake, and since then much of my joy has been discovering the people next to me.

How glibly we sort out people, label them, and put them in pigeonholes, as if we knew it all. Their accidental failures, their pitiful mishaps, their strange stupidities and stumbling awkwardness!

Stanton, sitting on the veranda of his trading shack, evinced no the two perfectly matched black pearls he had got in the far-off New Hebrides.

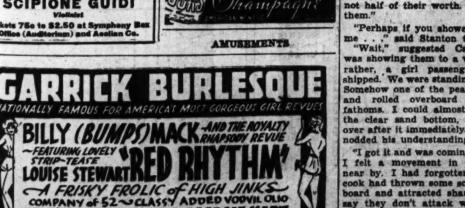

He returned Carville's firm hand-shake and reached for the special against the advent of his guest. The two sat in silence sipping their drinks and listening to the swish of the surf on the beach and the dry rattle of the cocoa fronds from the grove behind the shack.

Stanton was the first to break the silence. "You must have had vir vinced me that the young people to a good trip," he advanced in a conversational way. "Let's see, you've been gone 10, 11, months now, isn't it?" Carville nodded and took a out here. Also, I think it will be my last one. I've decided to go back to Honolulu and settle down! Stanton made no comment, yet inwardly he exulted. When a man decides to retire he needs ready cash. And Carville had two of the most perfect pearls ever to come out of the Pacific! The trader's instinct for a good and profitable deal awakened, warily.

"I suspect a woman in it some-where!" he bantered, very careful Stanton was not particularly anxious to hear, but then he was, after all, the host. "Let me give you another drink," he said. Carville "A very good trip, Stanton," he conceded. "In fact, I consider it the best I've had in my 12 years the best I've had in my 12 years to asted him, and a strange quirk twisted his mouth.

"Stanton," he said confidingly, "I managed to pick up a couple of matched pearls in New Hebrides for almost nothing . . . perfect black ones, mind you, and almost as large as pigeon eggs!"
"I had heard something of the

"Worth 50 thousand at the very least in anybody's market, if they are worth a plugged copper!" The trader made a rapid mental calculation of his own wealth. If he

"Perhaps if you showed them to me . . ." said Stanton tentatively. "Wait," suggested Carville. "I was showing them to a woman, or. was showing them to a woman, or, rather, a girl passenger I had shipped. We were standing on deck. Somehow one of the pearls slipped and rolled overboard into five fathoms. I could almost see it on the clear sand bottom, so I went over after it immediately." Stanton nodded his understanding.

"I got it and was coming up when I felt a movement in the water near by. I had forgotten that the cook had thrown some scraps overboard and attracted sharks. Some say they don't attack white men. I believe they do. Anyway, the next thing I knew the girl was flashing down through the water and had riped the belly of the nearest shark. "I got it and was coming up when
